I have tricked you into thinking I am someone you could love and that explains the candles and the incense Trying to be oriental claimed to own a crystal ball and told you that we had a future waiting

All my stories, merely daydreams, too transparent lines of hope I'm sorry for the poetry that I never really wrote Even if you can forgive the lying coming from my mouth
I bet you'll figure out I'm not that

much to cry about
much to cry about
much to cry about
So dry your eyes and forget about me

I have tricked you into thinking I am someone you could hate and that explains the panic and the drama Trying to be extraordinary acting on a twist of fate I managed to escape my true persona All my angry outbursts, merely ways to try you're temper and I'm sorry for the china that lays broken in the kitchen
Even if you can forgive the lying
coming from my mouth
I bet you'll figure out I'm not that

much to cry about
much to cry about
So dry your eyes and forget about me

This is me excusing myself, throwing in the towel walking off

I wouldn't blame you if you tried to burn my pictures cause I'm not much to cry about
