The lights flash and hearts race this stand still traffic, does not help as the fire rages and the shedding of blood continues on we sit still, we cant move a path is made, and we break free sound the alarm help is on the way, and at the crime scene, victims lay still the police are already there you dont hear steady breathing where we go only gasps, begging for pure air lungs cant hold the blood you gave them inside they drown, outside they smile eyes of the victims roll back catching a glimpse of the fire the blaze is taking over, they all know what happened its not the pills, not the bottles they were all framed, every one of them bystanders watch, in horror (O the horror) night is falling, and so are the hopes shocks and stares, are no help get the stretchers, get the bags familes will mourn, children will cry they will ask, answers never come tragedy has fallen, along with the sun it got cold, so did our love like the setting sun, we all rest our hearts relax and our minds wonder.
