those lonely moments got you talking to yourself as long as no one's there to listen you're not ashamed those lonely moments got you drinking to your health as long as day becomes the night you're still maintained and now the situation calls for depth below your greatest fears and though it seems as time has not progressed your eyes are filled with tears you haven't seen yourself in years these precious days are quickly running out and let me tell you all about what he just did he sat and worried that his days were running out and he never realized how far he'd slid and his face hasn't changed and he knows just what's left to do he's got to change his tired ways but nobody knew, not even you
