Drifting open to persuasion
Lonely as a cloud on a summer's day
Waiting, searching for a reason
Walking till the breeze blows the mist away

Whenever thoughts are fading fast
And losing track of time
There's always something even better
If you change your mind

Something out of this world
Something wonderful
Something out of this world
Something wonderful

Breathing, seconds turn to hours
Innocence surrenders to yesterday
Growing like a city flower
Pure amongst the dirt where the children play

Whenever melancholy falls
Like shadows in your mind
There's always something
Left behind the scenes for you to find

Something out of this world
Something wonderful
Something out of this world
Something wonderful

Whenever dreams are fading fast
And losing track of time
There's always something even better
If you lose your mind

Something out of this world
Something wonderful
Something out of this world
Something wonderful

Something out of this world
Something wonderful

Something out of this world
Something wonderful
