I don't know if I can swim today
I could barely float yesterday
You yank my line almost every single time
And I don't know if I can swim today

The waves crashed into me, I was safe in the sun
Now my feet can't touch the bottom and I've come undone
The pulling of tides, the reaching for shore
The haven where hearts mend tumbles to sea once more

And things fall all around, sand slips through my hands
In the pulling of tides do I swim or do I stand?

I don't know if I can swim today
I could barely float yesterday
You yank my line almost every single time
And I don't know if I can swim today

It's this place between and before you and not you at all,
But the losing and finding myself in love's call
The pulling of tides now I float quiet in blue Sky stretches above me, soon shore will come into view

And things fall all around, love slips through my hands
In the pulling of tides, do I swim or do I stand?

I don't know if I can swim today
I could barely float yesterday
You yank my line almost every single time
And I don't know if I can swim today
I don't know if I can swim today
I don't know if I can swim
