And all that I wanted, was to hear what was echoing through my mind I love you don't leave me, screaming after you the worlds most cliché line
You think im a coward, ill take on the world to prove you wrong
But letting you beat me, might not be what you wanted all along Im scratching at screendoors, trying hard to escape and calm down besides I can act like a man but, all I feel like is a grounded kid inside
And all that I wanted

Run into the spotlight, with a smile on my face Be glad for the freedom, but long for the moments that you took away Confessing while holding my breath to the people with their hearts turned in Be glad for the rock that I stand on and laugh of the creeping chagrin

No! Way you'll ever take me, from the house these brothers built
Eight hands, four hearts and a wall, that might as well
be real
No! Way you'll ever top the feeling, that this human machine makes me feel

And all that I wanted, is all that I wanted Everything, ground into, breaking the light

Oh!
No! Way you'll ever take me, from the house these brothers built
Eight hands, four hearts and a wall, that might as well
be real
machine makes me feel
