As I sat aboard the last train i could find probably heading backwards, but in the drink car i'll be alright
and i stumbled, and almost fell under the wheels falling into darkness begging for my life never again,
but i found out

and i never felt that way again
but i'll never forget blindsided blacked out falling down i passed out wondering whether we had stopped waiting for the conductor, to tell me that the tracks been wiped out by the landslide, that's chased me since the day i left woke up screaming blindly begging for my life never again, but i found out

and with each passing day i'd wake to find the dream the same and everybody thinks that nothings wrong so don't bother holding breath, cause you know it won't be long

And the train kept rollin on into the night i felt it skip the track, and slowly i looked up to find out that the landslide, will always find you in the end hiding in the corner begging for your life
again and again, but you'll find out
