She was born into the perfect house and perfect family Something that so many others would kill for Raised in this home; raised by her mothers side Mom was her best friend and Dad was her hero

Mom and Dad are watching over her The're watching over her
And they show her what she cannot see The things she can't do all on her own

She's hidden herself behind her pretty eyes and plastic smile
But she's living her life by every passing lie Trying hard to stay unnoticed so that no one ever knows
About the life she leads when she thinks no one's watching

But someone's watching over her He's watching over her
And he knows what no one else can see
He will know if she believes

She's met the perfect boy with the matching pretty eyes and plastic smile
Of course they're hoplessly in what they believe to be true love
And they'll say "I Love You" not knowing what they're getting into
They don't realize that they're only in lust and so far from love

But someone really loves them
His love is pouring down on them
And they are too caught up to see All they need is to believe

Out of high school and off to college with her sweatheart at her side She goes to all the games to watch him play and scream his name so loud

He doesn't feel the strong feelings that he used to so he buys her a ring Their getting married next summer and the ring didn't fix their problems

But someone has the answer to all their problems
He is the answer
And they'll keep looking on this earth Hoping to find what they never had

She enters the room with tears streaming out her blakened eyes
But she's won because he's beaten her for the last time They're signing the papers and then she'll be free of the boy
Who's pretty eyes and plastic smile gave way to alcohol and sinful ways

But those ways can be forgiven
They don't know because they've never been told
And will you be the first to let them know Of the love that they've been looking for
