Dear Joan
I've almost forgotten
The pane in the window
Blue dress in the doorway
Dear Joan
Help me remember
The face I forget
And the traps that I've sprung
I guess I grow tired it's just what's expected of me
To tear your heart from the inside to the outside You know I was wired, I just couldn't help it the hundred, thousand times that I hurt you Dear Joan I wanted to say that I'm sorry for the screaming last night
and the nights before Well I wanted more from this Than anything I've ever known
Dear Joan
Dear Joan
Your face has a brightness That I've never seen in the years that I've known you
Dear Joan
I pick up the pieces
But some scattered too far
You see they flew when I kicked them
I know you believed when I said it was over You stood by me patiently waiting and rolling

So deeply in love with every face that I've shown
Dear Joan I wanted to say
that I'm sorry for the screaming last night
and the nights before
Well I wanted more from this
Than anything I've ever known Once I forgive, twice I'm a fool
Three times I've wrapped my hands around your neck While you're sleeping, you're quietly sleeping Sleeping and dreaming
Dear Joan
Don't walk out that doorway because if you did - I believe

I could honestly kill you
Dear Joan I wanted to say
that I'm sorry for the screaming last night
and the nights before
Well I wanted more from this
Than anything I've ever known
that I'm sorry for the screaming last night
and the nights before
Well I wanted more from this
Than anything I've ever known
Dear Joan
