"Then And Now"

We can sit down later
And figure out where we stand
Now that I don't come around much anymore
Now that I don't come around much anymore

My crease in your mattress is still here
Fuck, it's been a lonely year
He can fill my space but he will never take my place

We can lie here for now
And run our fingers down the scars
Why do we always go for blood now?
Why do we always go for blood now?

I accept the fact that I'll see you around
After all, you own this town
But no way you can walk these streets and not remember me
