I was just living in a horror show trapped under sea in new cement shoes trying to speak in every tongue tied up in white with nothing but time to spare.
Heroes come in every shade these walls just build themselves
I am trying to reach the sun but falling short I just regret the day.

I am just living in this cheap motel swimming in the streets of a feeding frenzy the air could but wear me down the moon pulling tides from a dried up ocean.
I would just give it all up but there's a simple answer to drive our motorcade out of the now into a new tomorrow.

And I waste my days again
no time with my friends
this moment could be better spent
And I waste my days again
no time with my friends
this moment could be better spent.

Maybe I could fill my days lost in love a new escape plan.
Maybe I could take her home she might be that special person Maybe I should follow God work real hard take more vacations Maybe I should solve the stars be on TV, rich and famous.

But that was all a lucid dream that I should just shake awake from.
A sickening fantasy that leaves me a worthless empty
Lights on, Lights going out put me into motion,
Two-minute hates in quick succession.
I was just waiting I could better find myself.
Lights on, lights going out put me into motion,

Two-minute hates in quick succession.
