Rough Translations

Lydia, with your vague gaze
Why do you wander with an ocean of heartbreak
You've been hurt; even your smile paces about
Gypsy girl, who do you sing for?

You will see fog, see rain, see the sun
The cracked earth yields heartache again

He left, but can't take away your heaven
When the storm is over it will leave a rainbow
He left, so you can leave your dreams behind
There must be a place to wait for love to take flight

Lydia, happiness isn't far away
Open your windows, and make a wish

You will feel love, feel hate, feel forgiveness
Life will not always be filled with heartache

He left, but can't take away your heaven
When the storm is over it will leave a rainbow
He left, so you can leave your dreams behind
There must be a place to wait for love to take flight

He left, but can't take away your heaven
When the storm is over it will leave a rainbow
He left, so you can leave your dreams behind
There must be a place to wait for love to take flight
