What sweet nights those were when love lay in waiting when you came to meet me water roaring through the night.

Took us in its tow
we had a windmill
by the waterspring
tacking the squares
planted with shadow
my grandfather used to grind for the neighborhood
grain and vigils.

People milled
around the squares
some carrying bags
some in cars
back and forth
songs kept roaring
on those roads.

Yay yay yay
O sleepless nights
yay yay yay
the sweet one on my mind
We sang
We sang
We sang on the roads.

Days rolled on
and by and by the windmill grew silent on the water's shoulder my grandfather became a windmill of memories
grinding out sun
and shadow.
