"Where I Stand"

If I had a whole heart that was pure
That could not see the hatred
Who would I be?
If my life meant something, had a purpose a reasoning
I know who I'd be Someone strong who could crush
All your lies, all the power you hold
I would show you my real strength
Then you'd know, who I am, who I'll be
And where I stand, and if it's worth it to be with me
When I know where I stand, who will I be

And if I hold out my hand would you turn on me
As I lie in this bed, my heart is dead, and I can't find the answers
To these questions in my head Slow to think, fast to speak, and I'll pay the price for my conceit
And lack of self control. Whose to blame
Only me. This heresy that mercilessly pins me
Oh I am my own victim. Hung to dry, left to die
I look to the sky but can't find what I seek there.
Who have I become
My fight within is a cold one
