Because your color don't change, color don't change
Your color don't change, color don't change
Your color don't change, color don't change
Your color don't change, color don't change

Images cut up in your head
A clone in raspberry fields
You try your best to change the way you're made
But your color don't change at all

You've got to get it away, get it away
The micro-clones that chain to the bitter and grey
You should get out the way, get out the maze to breathe
Because your taste is the one and the same

This may be why
You have no reason for living

Because your color don't change, color don't change
Your color don't change, color don't change
Your color don't change, color don't change
Your color don't change, color don't change

You're spitting bits of verbal out but you don't really have a clue
You should create your life with what's in you
So what are you gonna do?

You've got to get it away, get it away
The micro-clones that chain to the bitter and grey
You should get out the way, get out the maze and see
That your taste is the one and the same

This may be why
You have no reason for living

Because your color don't change, color don't change
Your color don't change, color don't change
Your color don't change, color don't change
Your color don't change, color don't change

Yeah your brain is living in a dream
Changing it all it's all the same
Yeah your brain is living in a dream
Changing it all it's all the same
Yeah your brain is going insane
Changing it all it's all the same
Yeah your brain is living in a dream
Changing it all it's all the same

Because your color don't change, color don't change
Your color don't change, color don't change
Your color don't change, color don't change
Your color don't change, color don't change

You know you gotta be free
You know you gotta be free
