The sailor walks across the ocean
Unsafe on waves of glass
Any time dark skies could open
He could perish at the mast
His stomach turns, the potion burns
He's lifting every stone
Money comes, and money goes
Man must always have a home
Money comes, and money goes
Man could never be alone
Hunter in his leafy temple
Monkeys sing the lions ride
Jungle tempting with example
His gun always by his side
Potion burns, his stomach turns
He's lifting every stone
Money comes, and money goes
Man must always have a home
Money comes, and money goes
Man could never be alone
Astronaut on a traveled plan

Searching for his other man
The plastic pawn is in his hand
And in the other, a looking glass
His stomach turns, the potion burns
He's lifting every stone
Money comes, and money goes
Man must always have a home
Money comes, and money goes
Man could never be alone
Money comes, money goes
