I say, and so say I
My morning thought
It knew itself just fine
Until across the room
It caught its first glimpse of my afternoon
How can it be
That these things live in me?

I say, and so say I
My mornings day seems nothing like its night
My night so self assured
Was all at sea when faced with dawns strange world
How can it be
That these things live in me?

I say, and so say I
My mornings day seems nothing like its night
My night so self assured
Was all at sea when faced with dawns strange world
How can it be
That these things live in me?
