So far from me stands a man known as disease,
He's shaking all the hands of the people that he meets,
And now you just don't see me anymore,
Now I've been losing everything.

You just don't see me anymore,
I'll say goodbye,
Since you left she's a mess,
She regrets all the things that she could have said but...
We fall asleep,
Never think about anything.

We wake to the sound of a phone as it hits the ground,
And now, you just don't see me anymore,
Now I've been losing everything,
You just don't see me anymore,
I'll say goodbye.

And oh at the wake,
At the wake,
I will turn to see a face,
Just a face, just a face, so surrounded by a name,
What a name, what a name,
And you never want to change,
What you gave, what you gave, never want to let go.

So surround me,
I need anything,
And you, you're everything I want,
To live like I did before all this hit,
To sleep in your arms, to think,
We'll never fall apart and oh.

You know it's,
You know it's such a drag to live your life for a heart attack,
To never get a second chance to say goodbye,
So say goodbye I'll never get to try,
You just don't see me anymore,
Now I've been losing everything,
You just don't see me anymore,

I'll say goodbye.
