when the cafe doors exploded i reacted too, reacted to you reacted to you cast into the sunny morning i was coming too, but now i'm coming to, but now i'm coming to, papers in the wind a-waltzing, i was dancing too, my mind danced to you, lifed up on wings of strangers, saw a face and knew, then i saw you red- white and bruised

silent for a moment, then singing i thought i could hear, singing turned to sirens as ringing returned to my ears and the sirens called me back to there miserable rock, while you're following the sparrow, i can only fallow the clock
