"Lie Tonight"

It's been weeks since we talked out loud.
Anything I hear that I think about,
Every time I feel something up or down,
It'll be about you.

It's an illusionist thing that I could do.
I'll just take a cruise off and coast off into space,
Find a place to stay, a lil' change of scenery.
Still all this change remains the same.

But we can lie tonight.
Forget I'm not yours and you're not mine,
And we'll fall asleep here.
You know how we used to.

There's a feeling that I can't let out.
The one where my head is spun around
And all my insides are falling out,
Dangerously romantic.

'Cause if time is so bruised up, illusion,
That's what I confused with is that what I want?
Losing for the truth, waste away the future,
I know we belong where we both are.

But we can lie tonight.
Forget I'm not yours and you're not mine,
And we'll fall asleep here.
You know how we used to.

We can lie tonight,
Let the morning fill the sky
And still be sleeping,
You know how we used to.

So deep in love with you

But we can lie tonight. (Yeah)
Forget I'm not yours and you're not mine, (Let the morning fill the sky)
And we'll fall asleep here.

You know how we used to. (You know how we used to do)

We can lie tonight, (We can lie tonight)

Let the morning fill the sky (Oh, let the morning fill the sky)

And still be sleeping, (Yeah)

You know how we used to. (You know how we used to, yeah)
