I am disappointed every morning that I wake up
I am disappointed by the feeling of waking up next to you
You call me up
Let me know that
That my sick guilt is so unwelcome
It's so unwelcome

I hear voices in the darkness
I hear sadness inside you
I hear noises in the darkness
I hear sadness inside you

My health is failing me
So I flip on the television
And watch sad movies
And look for sad sick people like me
Call me up and let me know that
That my sick guilt is so unwelcome
I'm so unwelcome
We could go
We could go through the front door
I come in through the front door

And the pills
They will not
Will not
Will not
Will not let me go
And I will not
Will not
Will not let you drink yourself alone
You call me up
And let me know that
That my sick guilt is so unwelcome
You're so unwelcome
