I still remember when we were rolling in the rain to steal all from life we're left always empty-handed we were consoled by the blood pact with the future
to be ourselves forever till the Dawn
defeats the Night.
Sometimes we felt
like heroes
but we crowded the street like solidiers without a mission Now you're walking on the banks of resignation where the wind of years makes leaves fall like knives that stab to death the hope you keep the ashes of the dream in your shelter from the storm and pay every bill that fear gives you How many times we shouted the truth no one answered
how many times we came out in pieces from the struggle against the fate Season go away faster and faster and I don't know if on this road I'm flying or looking but there's a place where we could still conspire together against these hard times over there, where dawn defeats the night
but we crowded the streets
