Written on daily jog past Holland Park, London)

Time improves you or dilutes you

But there is no standing still

If you don't scream nobody hears you

If you won't fight then no-one will

When I'm walking

Walking through walls

Walking through walls

You can breathe under water

You will find it hard at first

Getting used to ritual slaughter

Feeling like your head might burst

Bare your teeth and bang your drum

Get up on your legs and start to run

No no no you can't sit down

No-one's friend and no-one's clown

You can't argue with a mad man

Age of reason's sinking fast

As your arms become steel girders

Crashing through a sheet of glass

When I'm walking

Walking through walls

Walking

Walking through walls

Bare your teeth and bang your drum

Get up on your legs and start to run

No no no you can't sit down

No-one's friend and no-one's clown

Walking

Walking through walls
