Lonely people trying to get up on a crowded hill
In desperate tryin' to find something they've lost
Lonely people lying to themselves just for the thrill
They give it all no matter what the cost

Who do you laugh with once you reach the top
Who do you lean on when it's time to drop
How do you make it back to do the ground
Who's gonna guide you when there's no one around
The problem's not how to get up but how to get down

Reckless people timing everything for their attack
They never see the risk that they might fall Reckless people climbing and they're never looking back
But one mistake's enough to end it all

The sun is gonna burn your skin
Your mind is gonna tricky you when the air gets way too thin
So save your oxygen
