In the pale neon light of a Saturday night
You'll see him walk up to the bar
He'll size up the ladies, the no's and the maybe's
Till he finds one who'll let down her guard
Then the band on his hand gets slipped off again
And his disarming charm starts to work
And with a drink and a lie, in the blink of an eye
Somethin' amazing occurs

He's suddenly single
Instantly free
And for three or four hours
He's the man of her dreams
He acts like there's no one, waiting at home
He'll be suddenly single, oh
Till he's suddenly gone

He sneaks through the door at a quarter to four
But tonight there's no one to wake
The note that she wrote him says, 'I've given up hopin'
I'd be able to change you someday'
He sits on the bed, shakin' his head
A man in complete disbelief
He knows what he's lost
Oh, but he never thought
Someday, he'd really be

Suddenly single
Instantly free
And for the rest of his life
She'll haunt his dreams
And now there'll be no one, waiting at home
He's suddenly single
'Cause she's suddenly gone
He's suddenly single, oh
'Cause she's suddenly gone
