

Terri Clark "The One You Love"

Visit "The One You Love" on MotoLyrics.com

He says it's none of my damn business how much he drinks

And he doesn't have a problem, no matter what the whole town thinks

At his baby's birthday party there was whiskey on his breath

Everybody wants to save him but he's not ready yet

You wanna scream, you wanna cry

You want someone to tell you why

All the hope that's in your heart is not enough

You hit your knees, you shake your fists

Oh, it's the deepest wound there is

When you can't help the one you love

Her sister reads the Bible, her father sits and snores

They're with her every minute 'cause they may not have many more

She was dancing in New Orleans only seven weeks ago

Life may go on with out her but not the life we know

You wanna scream, you wanna cry

You want someone to tell you why

All the hope that's in your heart is not enough

You hit your knees, you shake your fists

Oh, it's the deepest wound there is

When you can't help the one you love

When someone's slipping away, right before your eyes

How useless we are is a painful surprise

You wanna scream, you wanna cry

You want someone to tell you why

All the hope that's in your heart is not enough

You hit your knees, you shake your fists

Oh, it's the deepest wound there is

When you can't help the one you love

When you can't help the one you love

Visit Terri Clark page on MotoLyrics.com, to get more lyrics and videos.

