

Heyday

Well the city's on fire and it's at my own hand.

See, I built the inferno at a Higher Power's command,

And it takes away all that I have.

Good for nothing, pretty sad.

Once there was goodness, now only bad.

Then I threw up a target, hit it right between the eyes.

Where I'd go undiscovered, all my faces recognized.

Then the greatest of evil hit me hard, took me fast.

One thing's for certain, I'll never last.

In my private hell, no fear, don't tell

A dirty cell, no one can see

But this time confined to live, a place I've Never been before now.

Now a key's been handed down my way,

I hope it opens doors.

Though my love is strong,

I still pay for my wrongs.

When the lights go down.

Now all the people and places,

They're a fogged out memory.

All the scars and the sorrow,

that's the thing they did for me.

Like a man that's been blinded, eyes open, do not see,

I need some answers, send one to me
