Who told you about a man without fear?
Who told you about a God who does not care?
Who told you about a pain that does not hurt?
Who told you about a love that turns to dirt?

Devils

You've got a face to face with your devils
You've got a race to race with your devils
You've got to find a place among your devils
You cannot replace your devils

Devils

Who told you about cause and effect?
Who told you about a heart that can forget?
Who told you about fortune and fame?
Who told you that the evil has got no name?

Devils

You've got a face to face with your devils
You've got a race to race with your devils
You've got to find a place among your devils
You cannot replace your devils, you can't deny devils
They'll get you in the night

Who told you?

Who told you?

Devils

You've got a face to face with your devils
You've got a race to race with your devils
You've got to find a place among your devils
You cannot replace your devils, you can't deny devils
They'll get you in the night, devils

Devils, devils
