Hold my thoughts I'm at an impasse

Past the place I stopped before

The sweeper's sweeping fragments

Of my head out the door

And the ice it burns upon my forehead

The calmness starts to scream

Must I always hold the upright

When my soul longs to dream

Chorus

Is it too much to find an answer

Is it too much to hold you close

Is it too much to find a reason

Is it too much to free my soul

From self control

I can't get it any better

I always end up killing time

Time for love and time for living

Time to find what's really mine

Chorus Twice

And I know you're always waiting for me

You take me far away

And I know you're holding me

And it's better now . . .

And it's better now . . .

And it's better now .
