06.32 I'm always looking at you, I let my pulse realign
And as you're starting to wake, by the light of the day I will show you you're mine in everything I do in everything I say and in every time I look at you

I've been counting the times, when I crossed over lines I was thinking 'bout you, yeah the sting in something we said, but we forgive and forget, little things that we do (in everything) in everything you do
(and in everything I say) and that's why every time
I look at you

It's gotta be this way, 'cos I won't let you down and some things will not change
We might be losing ourselves, so high to believe
There must be some kind of way, confide in me

Over again always something begins yeah let me inside this place Well it's such a beautiful fear, that you might be replaced
And don't you ever believe, what you have may not leave Yeah don't you be growing old, without the one that you know You'll forget how to show yeah, what you felt in this place

Yeah I'll be here for you, it's gotta be this way and I won't let you down
And some things will not change
We might be losing ourselves, so high to believe
There must be some kind of way, confide in me

You better learn being old, like I said and if I fall, and if I fear everything's been replaced, then I will always believe.
