oh sometimes serenity means a long drive home across night skies fueled by reverie and stars they play headlights... rubbing sleep out of eyes I watched you that night clinging to say you measure every step in back roads and all of the silent trips to go sometimes saying nothing means more than saying it all well tonight we learned something it's that we'd drive so.. and if I had the chance I'd offer you my hand
you'll win me at a glance before another moments past I realize
and accept just who you are well it's not too hard to let me drive you so pastfar I could just as easily fold into the canvas laid over me and you and i cant help but wonder why what's so appealing about peeling skies? what's so appealing about peeling light? once we've peeled we can see all sights
and if I had the chance
well it's not too hard to let me drive you so past don't worry I understand just look at these skies with lights so grand now were we? I think we planned to make this ride never end

far
