He walks down the station
With everything he's got
Seeking communication
Searching for his God

But who will ever care
About the fear in his eyes
How long will they bear
The bitter tears he cries
Will they always stare
At eternal lies

He walks down the station
Trying to get things done
He knows his situation
In fact he never won

But who will ever care
About the fear in his eyes
How long will they bear
The bitter tears he cries
Will they always stare
At eternal lies

Driven by emotion
For what I have to face
Begging for devotion
To heal this human race

I hope we'll ever lose our disguise
By taking notice of the tears in his eyes

He walks down the station
Trying to look upright
Crying for a revelation
To feel that sacred light

But who will ever feel
The pain he has inside
Is there time to heal
What has almost died

Who will ever pray
For the dream in his head
He's living by the day
Yesterday is dead

Driven by emotion
For what I have to face
Begging for devotion
To heel this human race
