Daniel Mclean says he's lost all his dreams and he lost all his hair but he found an affair that makes him feel alive when he cheats on his wife because the man he was died from routine oh God set me free from the dubious dreams of the Daniel Mcleans and their lies

Daniel's bride can't do anything right it's just not like it was when they first fell in love so he justifies the adulterous nights because he's not the one who has changed

oh God set me free from the dubious dreams
let me see the truth that what may not be new has always been good and been right it wasn't a moment he didn't decide not to love her but one day, more than he wanted his wife he wanted others he did not fight, did not shed his blood did not give his life, he gave up on love
