A man needs an airplane (Happy Chichester)

I was hoping I could talk with you But the phone was disconnected when I finally got through.
And the thought of you came on like a crash
And the time I had for breakfast made me hunger for cash.
And the words I lived I wrote you too late Coz I had to find your mother to hear you moved out of state.
And the phases of the moon are in time
With the way my mood reflects all the crazy thoughts in my mind.

Somewhere, I bet, somebody's asking your name.

A man needs an airplane to let him know that all is alright
A man needs an airplane to bring him back to earth
sometimes
And to get away with,

Afternoon has left me again
And the colours of the evening look nothing like your skin.
And the coolness of the breezes enfold
And I see your pale reflection coming across the unknown.

I don't know why, you look like a bride to me.

A man needs an airplane to let him know that all is
alright
A man needs an airplane to bring him back to earth

Oh an airplane to let him know that he's not alone Satisfy his need for a song
Wait on him when he disappears

A man needs an airplane
