As I wake today, same as yesterday
I get in my car, poor turn my wheels
So much to say, who's got time to listen
Fulfill our dreams, shame is left unseen

Why should someone lose so that I get by?
Why should someone pay just to send me high?

No one has to cry while I can smile
No one owns the sky, so blue above you
But somewhere in this world is a field where we all play
Secrets in your eyes, no one has to cry

There's no self-control as we play our roles
It's all dog eat dog, we're all dressed for show
As we plot and scheme full of American dreams
Who says it's fair who gets the opportunities?

There are some who live without so that I get by They pay the price for doubtin' just to send me high

No one has to cry while I can smile
No one owns the sky, so blue above you
'Cause somewhere in this world is a field where we all
play
Secrets in your eyes, no one has to cry
No one has to, oh, no

Why should someone lose so that I get by?
Or pay the price for doubting just to send me high?

No one has to cry while I can smile
No one owns the sky, so blue above you
'Cause somewhere in this world is a field where we all
play
Secrets in your eyes no one has to cry

No one, no one, no one has to cry
'Cause somewhere in this world is a feeling we possess
Secrets in your eyes no one has to cry

No one, no one, no one has to cry

No one, no one, no one has to cry, no one has to cry
