I walk down these streets and I don't, I don't, I don't have to wonder
I know. Do you really think that I care
What you really think about me?
Well, I don't. I'm over that now
I never thought the day would come
When I would say I think I've found it
My home. The city lights, they set me free
And let me know that I am worth it
We all are. It goes all around
There's room; I'm not walking in lines
No reason to walk only lines
Though it's been long overdue, somehow
I'm where I hear the sound Of something loud and clear That I've been waiting for Until now. And I woke up fresh this morning
The change came without much warning
Found myself where I belong
So far away from strife
