Sunbathing on a lawn chair, you were all greased up
with your blonde hair.

You were rubbing on the third coat.

You held a bottle in your hand, I held a suicide note.

I remember after Sunday school we used to skinny dip
in your cousins pool.

But then you bared some news I could not take.

I tied a rock to my foot and took a dip in the lake.

I may be dead and my heart may be too, but one thing
stands.

I knew from day one you were bad news.

Bitch I should have left you.

At the start I was in luck because you fell on the floor
and just begged to fuck.

But I've changed my mind since you boned that guy.

My only question love is "how'd you want to die?"

Now open your eyes, it's quite a ways down.

I'm gonna laugh so hard when you hit the ground.

Like when you laughed at that guy who was on T.V.

Except you're dying from a fall; he died from HIV.

You always used to joke about being a flirt,

and now you're crying cause your diving to your death
head first.

Behind my back you're in the sack; you thought id never know.

You took the chance and now you're dead; I'll take your stereo.

I may be dead and my heart may be too, but one thing
stands.

I knew from day one you were bad news.

Bitch I should have left you.

At the start I was in luck because you fell on the floor
and just begged to fuck.

But I've changed my mind since you boned that guy.
My only question love is "how'd you want to die?"
How do you want to die?
