I was sleeping soundly once upon a night when I had a simple dream There you were not saying a word All I heard was our heart beating.

You were bent on picking apples from the apple tree when you glanced my way.
With a hand you blocked the sun from your eyes and smiled an everlasting smile.
It was so unfortunate that my alarm clock told me

you're just a dream
you're just a dream
you're just a dream,
but I'd just love to make you real.

you're just a dream
you're just a dream
but I'd just love to make you real.

Next night I saw the end of bloody miscommunication.
All the sides they dropped their weapons and they drooped their heads in shame and clarity.
All of us who watched from the sidelines breathed a sigh.
Then I awoke and saw the paper with the people dying on the cover.

you're just a dream
you're just a dream
but I'd just love to make you real

I was sleeping soundly once upon a night when I had a simple dream
