Institutional loss of control
Interference from the unknown

As the vented light invade but shrinks space between the walls
Fish eye fascination finds the sweet across the hall Conversations echo through the springs beneath the bed
Elevator's rising but it doesn't reach my head

Institutional loss of control
Interference from the unknown
Institutional loss of control

Clinging to a driftwood table sinking through the floor
Focusing on footsteps slowly dragging past the door Wondering if the corridors were for old forgotten friends
Frightened of the future as this day's about to end

And I said
"One more withdrawal just to past time Breaking my fall for the last time"

Institutional loss of control
Interference from the unknown
Institutional loss of control
Interference from the unknown
