WHAT TOMORROW COULD BRING

What's with the world today?
What's with the world of yesterday?
Why do men cling to the hate
That will feed the death of life

I see the pain you feel,
I know it's all too real,
But I hear the sound of the glory in God's eyes.

But, way down low,
You feel the evil below,
It's hard to resist the temptations within,
so you bow down to sin,
You let the evil begin,
And you'll never know
What tomorrow could bring.

You wish for a better day,
But sit right there, let it decay, Idle minds distil the fire that burns away the soul.

So get up on your feet,
Go out and do a good deed,
'Cuz even the little things make the world a better place.

But way down low,
You struggle for control,
But all along you know,
If what you do is right.
but you bow down to sin,
You let the evil begin,
And you'll never know
What tomorrow could bring.

So what's with your world today?

I think I told you yesterday, that narrow minds bleed us dry and leave us for dead.

Can you try, to satisfy, something besides yourself,
take a stand, Lend a hand, give a little help.
