Somewhere along the road to your house
You took a wrong turn and abandoned yourself
Sailing slow, low, through the night

You say that you are a child of the world
But can you build bridges with some other girl?
Do you believe in freedom, son?
Do you remember, no matter the weather
You hide out and dance through the rain in the dark
Do you still believe in love?

When the journey began, your heart was in tears
Say that your heart is a burdon to bear
Dragging me with you through the sand

You say that time will heal of our wounds
Well, I wouldn't care for a day in your shoes
Do you believe in freedom, son?
Do you remember, no matter the weather
You hide out and dance through the rain in the dark
Do you still believe in love?

Do you remember, no matter the weather
You hide out and dance through the rain in the dark
Do you still believe in love?
Do you still believe?

Do you still believe in love?
