Now, I see you looking lost and he sits on his seat but, don't you walk on my street baby you can hear Lupita scream

The river's got your forehead darling it spies your city scene that city shines when you're away it can't hear Lupita scream

Yeah, but would be such a fool to rely on his dreams while New York houses pain and boredom in between the seas

Their taxis, man, have been following you they chase you down the street your cross builds a cross in the center of town it looks like a Christmas Tree

Well, the docks they went on strike again it's you, they don't want to see they said they'd rather get high then hear Lupita Scream [than]

You need some warmth and relaxation with the salesman of your dreams
but, don't you walk on my street baby
