Album : Seven Minutes in Heaven

if he gave all his time well he made you his faith well it wouldn't make you happy like the look on his face as you pulled out the hour glass and emptied his dreams like sand explained how his time meant nothing and to listen to your demands and all the work he's put in on you if you only knew sit down with him tonight and try to make it right so the story didn't say monday 'til tuesday and wednesday feels like go away day he abandoned ship that's what it took to prove the man overboard meant something to you and now you have to find a shoulder to cry on and tell your friends how it was all his fault it's never yours and now you feel you're growing older you're dead wrong and you can't spend a single day away from him if she gave all her time she gave up her friends well it wouldn't make you happy just to see her bend 'cause you feel you're the victim and she is so guilty what an easy sentence he's the judge and jury and all those nights he didn't spend with you if you only knew how do you feel inside it's just not right well should I go away I'll think about you everyday and please don't roll your eyes I'll ask you one last time well should we stay the same it would still be monday
