

The Honest Life

"Know You're Not Alone"

Visit "Know You're Not Alone" on MotoLyrics.com

Driving North with two friends of mine, heat's on high, on the east shore side, river's on my right, foggy passenger window is covered in ice, just one more month of this cold, landscapes are covered in a certain shade of grey, blankets of frost and ice, take take take, they take it away.

Show me your colors

Brittle bones and ice cream cones, superman is not
who you think, and if the sun doesn't shine for days at a time know you're not alone cuz we all smell the same stink.

Old money on the left side wear silk on their sleeves, the factories ahead make it hard to breath, just one more month of this cold, landscapers are covered in a certain shade of grey, blankets of frost and ice take take take, they take it away.

Show me your colors.

Show me your colors.

Brittle bones and ice cream cones, superman is not
who you think, and if the sun doesn't shine for days at a time know you're not alone cuz we all smell the same
stink

Visit The Honest Life page on MotoLyrics.com, to get more lyrics and videos.