Opening night for the same old show
Well the lights go down and the curtains up
Tell me is the spotlight bright enough?
Read the cards and recite those lines
You know they always seem so dry

And the words you say
They are getting old
but the choirs singing for you
"All is well, and all is gold!"
Can't you hear them singing for you?

Now you're everything that you hoped you'd be Oh yeah you know you've got
You've got everyone on the edge of their seats
Watching you so anxiously Hanging on to every word
You knew they always would

And the words you say
They are getting old
but the choirs singing for you
"All is well, and all is gold!"
Can't you hear them singing for you?

We'll move towards a steady place on solid ground
And the time will find us in our separate country towns

The pictures line your shelves
You wish that someone else adorned that golden frame
Above the fireplace
At night when you're in bed
I'll sneak inside your head
Into your wildest dreams
Cause you still need me

"All is well!" Not everything is gold
"All is well!" Not everything is gold
"All is well!" Not everything is gold
