You said I had what I came for
And the whispers had washed you away
Held yourself at the window
But the rivers were turning your head

You said I had what I came for
And the whispers had washed you away
Held yourself at the window
But the rivers were turning your head

After the crash,
After the crash come the waves
And leave you with nothing
At least next to nothing

You've got to give me love
You've got to give me more
You've got to give me love
You've got to give me more

Now the echoes are endless
Whenever you say it aloud
All the whispers are heavy
And the whispers they wear you down

After the crash come the days
After the crash come the waves
And leave you with nothing
At least next to nothing

You've got to give me love
You've got to give me more
You've got to give me love
You've got to give me more

Stretching far into another night
A landscape with no heart
And no one sees her above
Oh there's nothing more to it now
Put aside and forgotten

And forgotten too far gone to see you
And her eyes are too far gone to know
And her eyes are too far gone to know

You've got to give me more
You've got to give me love
You've got to give me more
