

Hot Lies, The "A Breath And It's Gone"

If parting is a sweet sorrow, why does this still taste bitter, against my lips?
Electric words crackle, their poison on the wire If parting is a sweet sorrow, why does it still taste bitter?
Or is it a blessing in disguise?

A breath and it's gone but it lingers, reminds me to feel something
A breath and it's gone but it lingers, reminds me to feel
something

We tread so carefully between every piece and promises that matter most As the sun leaves the gulf, colours saturate our ghosts Shadows faded, kept me contained Shadows faded, Now seem far away

A breath and it's gone but it lingers, reminds me to feel
something
A breath and it's gone but it lingers, reminds me to feel
something

take my hand, my everything Take this heart and soul to keep, chokehold and don't let me

take my hand, my everything
let me breathe

Blessing in disguise
Or is it a blessing

A breath and it's gone but it lingers
A breath and it's gone but it lingers
A breath and it's gone but it lingers, reminds me to feel
