

Hot Lies, The "One For The Memories"

I remember watching, the white lines racing past us
The reflections in your glasses, hiding looks that you would shoot me
The air in competition with the sound
Do you remember this song
It closed the show last night, never thought they'd pull it off so tight

This one's for the memories, of everywhere that we broke down
Before we broke down

All the words that I penned, were the words you heard
But nothing was said and everything broke down,
broke down
I'm falling apart when no one's around x2

This console full of matchbox, ignited from the start But who'd have known? You'd want to kill me With bright lights, sharp knives Whispers and long goodbyes

All the words that I penned, were the words you heard
But nothing was said and everything broke down,
broke down
I'm falling apart when no one's around x2

If I died tonight, underneath the same bright highway sky
Where every song's a reminder Here comes collision

All the words that I penned, were the words you heard But nothing was said and everything brakes and broken down

All the words that I penned, were the words you heard
But nothing was said and everything broke down,
broke down
I'm falling apart when no one's around x2
