Karen she's my boss at the shoestore
We sell to the rich on madison avenue
I come in late from brooklyn on the f-train
Karen says honey, make this your last time
But we like her, she's firm but approachable
Dresses in style, pretty conservative
We ask her, hey come out with us after work
But karen she always declines

Karen by night
We imagine she must lead a very dull life
With just a cat and a book by her side
We know her by day but we don't know
Karen by night
Karen by night

In the stockroom searching for a 9-b
I overheard karen whisper on the phone
She said: "meet me at the club
There's a shipment coming in
And i can't pull this one off alone."
Well, i didn't know what to think
Was my mind plying tricks
Was there more to this karen than realized
I had to know so i followed her home
And i could not believe my eyes
And then i saw

Karen by night
The leather comes out under the moonlight
Takes off her chanel and hops on her bike
Looking like young marlon brando
Karen by night

Saw her leaning on the bar with a drink in hand
And a cigarette dangling from her bright red lips
She looked like she was looking for someone Like she was looking for a fight Then a young blond buck walked in She grabbed him by the collar, she kissed him hard on the mouth and slapped him on the cheek then i thought she spied me in the corner of her eye so i ran outside but all night all i could think about was

karen by night

that next morning iâ€™m late as usual, karenâ€™s there fresh as a daisy she says with a smile, "you look like hell and where were you last night."

Karen by night

imagine she must lead a very dull life
With just a cat and a book by her side
We know her by day but we donâ€™t know
Karen by night
The leather comes out under the moonlight
Takes off her chanel and she hops on her bike Looking like marlon brando
Looking like young marlon brando
Wish i could be more like
Karen by night
