I remember when you said
you were full of sparks in your head Your words were fireworks in me
I saw my firework in you

I thought your skin was like a veil Concealing hope and fairytales and your hands were like a map from where many'll find their way back (at least I did)

Through fire
Through water
Through death do us
death do us part

Through fire
Through water
Through death do us
death do us part

You showed me where the swans would nest
You let the silence do the rest
And in that room of pearly white I saw your darkness and your light!

So when you get lost then I can find the architecture of your mind In quiet buildings you belong and I'll be there to sing this song:

"Through fire
Through water
Through death do us
death do us part

Through rainbows
Through rainfall
Through floodstreams of tears!

Through failure

Through absence
Through presence of human time!

Through everything with love
with love!

Through fire
Through water
Through death do us
death do us part"
